Almost every business man in this city knows that we have about thirty manufacturing enterprises in our midst, but few have an idea of the business they do. A representative of this paper visited the Melville Woolen Mill Co., and was greeted with a pleasant "Glad to see you, come in," from the polite and hustling manager, John C. Melville. He showed us through the mills and we watched the whirl of the machinery as it converted whirl of the machinery as it converted the wool as it came from the sheep's bac-to where it was made into the splendid sylvania C.
